

Conceptualists might not like it, but:

I am actually one of them.

My works oscillate between this and that.

They are not simply what they are.

Ask me what a work of art is?

Meaning? Knowledge? Reason? Solution?

Well I think you think quite a lot for years or so.

This might be the problem.

If you try to think then forget about trying.

You are still in the meta-mood of a crowd who will never be that meta.

I don't think it's that worth being that meta-moody.

Sophisticated?

I don't think so.

Just in need to explain.
